

The Bloomfield Record.

The End of the Great Trial.

The generally anticipated result of the Beecher Trial—a disagreement of the jury—was reached last Friday. The difference of opinion with the jurymen doubtless denotes the average sentiment of the community at large—a divided verdict. One great source of regret on account of the indecisive termination of that leaves the appalling perjury which has been committed in this case in the background. The unanimous acquittal of Beecher, or a verdict for Tilton, would have fastened this sin of perjury upon witnesses on one side or the other and paved the way for a righteous meeting out to the guilty parties, now likely to escape justice, their deserved punishment. As it now stands, the scandal, far worse than at first, is temporarily covered over, but only to be unearthed again in the future, for the truth must one day be established.

Public opinion upon the result as expressed in the leading newspapers is widely diverse. Such papers as the Brooklyn Eagle, and the Argus, the N. Y. Tribune, and others which have been intensely partisan on one side or the other, give opinions which are warped by prejudice and cannot be regarded as carrying weight or expressing true, unbiased sentiment. The more impartial press and pulp of the country, as a rule, neither defend nor openly condemn Mr. Beecher, their policy being silence or at least extremely cautious utterance. In an editorial article published in the New York Observer it is stated that the diversity of opinion on Mr. Beecher's guilt is not between distinct classes of men, as the good and the bad, the learned and the unlearned. "Ministers of the gospel, holding the most influential stations, and having the highest reputation for piety and talents, take precisely opposite views of the question. Thus we affirm from actual knowledge of the opinions of a number of clergymen. One gentleman assures us that the lawyers generally think the case was not proved, while we are assured from other sources that the lawyers are of the opinion that Mr. Beecher has failed to establish his innocence of the charge."

There has been much comment, lately, on Mr. Beecher's abandonment, made a week before the jury came in, to the effect that he should continue to preach in defiance of what might be the verdict. There is a very large class of people who believe that Mr. Beecher errs in insisting upon retaining his place as a pulpit orator and pastor. Lacking much what in charity, perhaps, they can see no reason why he should not now carry out the literal meaning of his own words by "stepping down and out." They believe that if guilty, he certainly ought to retire, and if innocent, his defence as put forth on the trial likewise debars him from preaching in that manifestly confessed a lapse from integrity, manliness and good sense which renders him totally unfit to stand forth now as a pattern of Christian character, or a public teacher of morality.

Another class, remembering that "to err is human," regard the once illustrious preacher with more leniency. They are willing to accord him the "benefit of the doubt," reaching forth the hand to aid him in regaining the position he has lost in the fair esteem of mankind.

Which class is nearest right we do not say. There may be too much zeal or vigor in judging Mr. Beecher; there is also a danger to be apprehended from viewing, in too charitable a light, a scandal which has gone round and round the world, and been so vastly profitable of harm in its influences. A great deal of charity need not be bestowed upon either principal in this case. But those who, being unincumbered by the sins of the guilty, are entitled to unbounded sympathy and commiseration. Charity in that direction is not lost.

We may thank God, on one account, that the scandal has come to light. There are healthful lessons to be derived from its exposure. Advanced notions of reform, loose doctrines of morality—all that is comprehended in the so-called "Gospel of Love,"—has been thoroughly ventilated, dissected and analyzed. The effect, it is sincerely hoped, will be a return to those older and safer tenets in Christian ethics from which advanced thinkers have been so prone to wander. Religion comes to us ready-made. It cannot be altered as a garment to suit circumstances or to make it easier for the wearer. It cannot, with impunity, be reconstructed and remodelled in accordance with the fashions of the day.

Man-Worship.

Plymouth Church, in the midst of a storm of hand-clapping, voted on Wednesday night to raise Mr. Beecher's salary from $25,000 to $100,000 for the current year.

The Tribune of the same day says: "It is stated in Brooklyn that several prominent citizens of that city, principally outside of Plymouth Church, who are personal friends and admirers of Mr. Beecher, proposed to prepare a call for a mass meeting of citizens, to be held in the Academy of Music one week from next Thursday evening. Mayor Hunter, it is reported, will be asked to preside at the meeting, and it is expected that speeches will be made and resolutions passed congratulating Mr. Beecher on the result of the great trial."

It may be in order at that meeting (if it comes off) to move for a revision of the Code of Sinai. The First Commandment might be amended as follows:—Thou shalt have no other gods before H. W. B.

A Little Boy's Forethought.

The Indianapolis Sentinel of Saturday, 3d inst., has this interesting story: "Last Tuesday the Cincinnati day express, going, east left Cincinnati on time, and was flying on its way at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, when approaching a bridge over a river, a few miles from Cincinnati, the engineer noticed a small boy in the middle of the track motioning wildly with his arms. The heavy train for several days before had caused the man at the throttle no little anxiety, and in a moment it flashed over his mind the bridge, but a very short distance ahead, was at least damaged by a curve and so hidden by trees that its disappearance would not have been noticed until too late. As soon as the passengers had gotten over the shock the full realization of their danger had dawned, a search was made for the boy. He was found sitting down on one side of the track, shaking as if he had a chill, so badly was he frightened. Every one on the train flocked around him. A brave little fellow, who said he was eleven years old, and almost crushed him in their joyful anxiety to even touch his body. He innocently said he did not begin shaking until he saw down, thereupon showing that no until he had seen the train stop in safety did his nerves give way. He said his name was Davis and that he lived near by, pointing to a farm-house. He was out his way home from a neighbor's when he discovered that the bridge had been washed away since passing an hour previous. He remembered the down passenger train, and knowing it was about time it came along, hurried up the track to give warning. He had only arrived at the spot where he was noticed by the engineer when the train came along. One of the passengers, and elderly Quaker lady, gave him five dollars, which he was reluctant to accept, although the conductor informed her that the officers of the road would reward the boy. The following day Superintendent Williams arrived at the scene and hunting out the hero gave him what money he had about him, some $20, with the promise that whenever he wanted anything at all that he should apply to him.

Michael Boston was shot and fatally injured on Tuesday night during a fight in Morristown, N. J., by Michael Kinney. A number of Irish laborers, all of whom were more or less under the influence of liquor, were in a saloon, in that city, and became boisterous. The dispute was finally narrowed down to Kinney and Boston, and words soon led to blows. Kinney, getting worsted, vowed that he would kill Boston, and left for home. He armed himself with a revolver, and it is stated loaded it before leaving the house again. Returning to the place where the quarrel had begun he walked deliberately up to Boston and presented the revolver at his breast and fired. Boston fell, and was removed to a hospital. Medical attendance was procured, but the physicians pronounced recovery impossible. After the shooting Kinney attempted to escape, but was arrested and placed in jail.

A correspondent writing from Mount Joy, Ohio, gives the following incident, which shows how a young girl had her nose city off because she had too much spunk to dodge a pair of scissors. "A most singular accident occurred here on Friday. A young lady and gentleman were amusing themselves with a pair of scissors, when the young man threatened to cut her nose off, thinking of course that she would draw her head back when he would snip the scissors at her; but she would not be scared or dared, and stood her ground, and the consequence was that he cut the end of her nose almost off. Dr. W. Ziegler fastened the nose on again, and thinks it will grow fast. They will find less dangerous playthings in the future."

The feasibility of carrying passengers directly by long Branch by water was demonstrated yesterday afternoon when the steamer Plymouth Rock, Commodore Tucker, ran alongside the incomplete wharf in front of the East End Hotel. The intention of the vessel being evident as she steamed close along the shore, gaily decked with bunting and the chimneys merrily ringing, hundreds of wondering people lined the beach and heartily cheered her. On the lawn in front of the Continental Hotel a cannon belled forth a welcome salute. The Rock responded with her gun, and cheered. Gilmore's band struck up "On the Beach at Long Branch." During the brief stay of the superb vessel the new wharf was crowded.

Three bushels of potato bugs were gathered from a four-acre patch on the farm of Samuel Horner, Stockton township, Camden county, in one day last week. Two men were employed in the work. They placed canvas between the rows, and with brooms swept the insects from the vines and emptied them into a barrel.

A Long Journey.

"I would gladly come again 180 miles to have teeth drawn as it is done by the Cotton Dental Association, in the Cooper Institute, New York City." So wrote a patient from Oswego, N. Y.
